CRIMINAL intent

Tom Hardy, Pierce Brosnan and Dame Helen Mirren join forces in Guy Ritchie's epic gangland drama MobLand

NEW DRAMA

MobLand

From Sunday 30 March,
Paramount+ (released weekly)

The latest offering from Guy Ritchie, director of Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels and The Gentlemen, is crime drama MobLand, a gritty gangland thriller that follows the fallout when two powerful London crime families go to war.

Hostilities commence after Eddie (Anson Boon), grandson of Irish crime kingpin Conrad Harrigan (Pierce Brosnan) and his wife Maeve (Dame Helen Mirren), goes on an ill-fated night out with Tommy, the son of Conrad's arch-rival in the drugs trade, Richie Stevenson (Geoff Bell).

After Eddie is involved in a stabbing and returns home in bloodstained clothing, Tommy is nowhere to be found, and it's down to Conrad's ruthlessly efficient fixer Harry (Tom Hardy) to deal with Tommy's furious father as he tries to uncover what happened.

Meanwhile, Harry has family troubles of his own, as his wife Jan (Joanne Froggatt), concerned about the state of their marriage, urges him to agree to couples counselling. While Harry's gangland activities bring financial benefits, it's also quite a restricted existence for Jan, who is first seen going to a primal-therapy class.

'MobLand is an epic underworld drama based around two warring families,' explains Froggatt. 'And everybody connected to them is dragged into situations they'd probably rather not be in. Jan is searching for something, and she wants Harry to open up. But with what he does for a living, it's difficult to have friends because she can't tell them about her life.'

Helen Mirren as Maeve and

We first meet the Harrigans' extended family when they gather at Conrad's country house for a business meeting. As well as Eddie's father Kevin (Paddy Considine), Conrad has two other children – oldest son Brendan (Daniel Betts) and daughter Seraphina (Mandeep Dhillon).

FAMILY LIES

'It is such an interesting family,' says Boon, who plays loose cannon Eddie, the youngest Harrigan, and previously starred as punk icon Johnny Rotten in Danny Boyle's TV series Pistol. 'Some people might say they're dysfunctional, but they do all love each other. At the same time, the currency within the family is different from most normal families as it is all about power, because the business is the family.'

Lara Pulver, who plays Eddie's mother Bella, adds that, while Conrad and Maeve are prime movers in the drug-dealing world, they are also good at manipulating their nearest and dearest.

'They encourage a kind of competitiveness within the family,' explains the Sherlock star. 'Although everyone has their own agendas and individual paths, Conrad and Maeve are always reining them in to do their bidding.

And with three children and one grandson, the question of who will inherit Conrad's empire is at the back of everyone's mind.

'That's bubbling underneath,' says Boon. 'The succession battle about who's going to be on the throne is kind of what keeps them together but, at the same time, at each other's throats.'

For 25-year-old Boon, being cast in a project with so many big names taking part was a thrill.

'I still get goosebumps,' he admits. 'It's the best cast I've been involved with, plus one of the best directors in Guy Ritchie, as well as writer Ronan Bennett, who created Top Boy, and [executive producer] Jez Butterworth, who has written some of the best plays in the West End. It's an incredible cocktail.'

Boon adds that working alongside big hitters Brosnan and Mirren was an absolute pleasure.

'What stood out, working with two legends like that, is how playful they were,' he reveals. 'They would crack us up all the time, and when you're in a scene with them, you know that something brilliantly unexpected is going to happen.'

Temptation ISLAND

After her fling, can Jaclyn repair her fractured friendships?

COMEDY DRAMA

The White Lotus

Monday, 9pm, Sky Atlantic

What began as a long-overdue opportunity to reconnect with her childhood friends has turned into a disaster for Hollywood star Jaclyn Lemon (Michelle Monaghan) in The White Lotus.

Despite hoping to strengthen her bonds with socialite Kate Bohr (Leslie Bibb) and lawyer Laurie Duffy (Carrie Coon), the trio have all been guilty of gossiping about each other in secret – and those conversations didn't stay private for long.

BROKEN BONDS

Stung by what she perceives as criticism from her pals over her fling with handsome health mentor Valentin (Arnas Fedaravicius), Jaclyn is feeling increasingly isolated.

'There's a lot of tension within this group of women,' Monaghan, 49, tells TV&Satellite Week. 'The dynamic and the power shifts throughout the season.'

The women are contemplating the ruptures to their friendship in this week's penultimate episode, and Monaghan reveals that series creator Mike White drew on his own vacation experiences when developing the storyline.

'I think he was a sidekick on a girls' trip and witnessed some of this behaviour, so he was inspired to write that into this season,' she says.

'He wanted us to lean into the idea that women constantly compare themselves to one another. We're really exploring that in the show.'

Although the characters may end up regretting their decision to go on holiday together, it was a very different situation for Monaghan, Bibb and Coon off-screen, as the three loved filming with one another in Thailand.

'It's so rare that I ever get to work with women,' says Monaghan. 'I'm constantly playing "the wife" or "the girlfriend", and most actresses will tell you that, so to have Mike write a storyline that feels relatable for a lot of women was awesome.'

'We spent so much time hanging out and just doing all the things you'd imagine we would do at a resort. It was really special.'

Williams with Jenny Slate as Nikki

NEW COMEDY DRAMA

Dying for Sex

From Friday 4 April, Disney+

Two years after her 2023 Oscar nomination for Best Actress in The Fabelmans, Michelle Williams makes a welcome return to our screens in Disney+ series Dying for Sex, a comedy drama inspired by the liberating final years of New Yorker Molly Kochan.

In the opening episode of the eight-parter, based on a podcast of the same name, Molly (Williams) walks out of her sexless marriage to Steve (Industry's Jay Duplass), her husband of 15 years, when she learns she has incurable breast cancer.

Her first port of call is best friend Nikki (Parks and Recreation's Jenny Slate), who gives her a bed while Molly sets in motion a quest to find sexual fulfilment before she dies.

'It's a story about a woman who's going through a sexual awakening just as she's faced with terminal cancer, but it's more than that,' shares Slate, who also starred in It Ends with Us. 'It's also about the friendship of these two women; when the other one is in the room, everything is better, more sturdy, fun and filled with promise.'

Molly wastes no time downloading dating apps, receiving saucy photos and embarking on various sexcapades. Meanwhile, chaotic aspiring actor Nikki takes on the task of organising her friend's palliative care.

'In the time she has left, Molly wants to live a life that, in many ways, she has denied herself,' explains Slate. 'The strength of the humour and the beautiful way sexuality is explored is gorgeous.'

Created and written by Elizabeth Meriwether (The Dropout) and Kim Rosenstock (Only Murders in the Building), the series also shines a light on Nikki's struggles to juggle Molly's medical and emotional needs with her career and new relationship with musician Noah (Kelvin Yu).

'In the show, Nikki expresses her anger in really punchy explosions while trying not to overtake Molly's experience,' says Slate. 'Nothing about the material made me feel frightened to perform it, but I did often feel deeply affected by it, and I think that's a really good thing.'

The cast includes Succession's David Rasche as Molly's conservative oncologist Dr Pankowitz, who is uncomfortable with his unconventional patient and her pal, and Catastrophe's Rob Delaney is Molly's repulsive yet intriguing new neighbour when she moves into her own apartment.

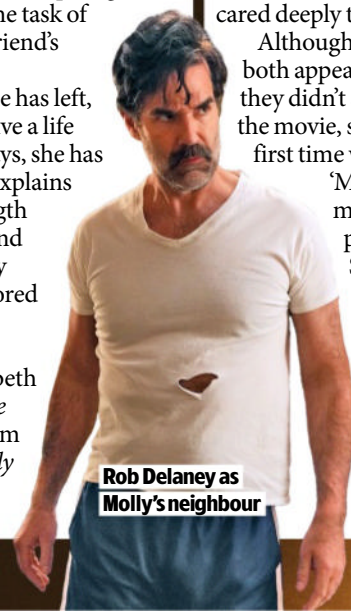

LIFE-ENHANCING

Sissy Spacek also appears later in the series in a scene-stealing performance as Molly's guilt-stricken mum Gail, who makes the journey to New York to spend time with her dying daughter. And the real Nikki Boyer makes a cameo as Molly's cousin Sheila.

'The complexity of the themes were a huge and exciting draw for me,' says Slate. 'I felt a large sense of gratitude that Molly [who died in 2019] and Nikki let us step inside that inner sanctum. I made sure the real Nikki knew that I cared deeply that this was her life.'

Although Williams and Slate both appeared in 2018's Venom, they didn't share any scenes in the movie, so this marks their first time working together.

'Michelle is one of the many reasons why this project was attractive. She is open, sensitive and vulnerable,' shares Slate. 'Dying for Sex is funny, provocative, warm and honest. It's a beautiful take on what it means not just to face death but to live a life.'

Bradley and Barney Walsh take on sumo stars in an adrenaline-fuelled Asian adventure

Wrestlemania

NEW TRAVELOGUE

Bradley & Barney Walsh: Breaking Dad

Tue, 8pm, ITV1 (box set, ITVX)

Sumo wrestlers, a perilous suspension bridge and a stomach-churning bungee jump are just some of the challenges faced by father and son Bradley and Barney Walsh as the pair head to Asia for their ITV1 travelogue Breaking Dad.

Now on their sixth series, this time the daring duo begin in Tokyo, where thrill seeker Barney has lined up more high-octane activities for his long-suffering dad Bradley. Their travels culminate in Chiang Mai, Thailand, where they face their biggest challenge to date when they try to conquer the Anxiety State Crisis Cave, a 70m-deep limestone cavern popular with rock climbers.

Here, Bradley, 64, and Barney, 27, who also host BBC1's Gladiators together, share some of their highlights...

What can you tell us about your Asian itinerary?

Bradley We started off in Japan, experiencing the hustle and bustle of Tokyo and Osaka, and it was even crazier than I thought it would be. We then hopped over to Thailand. The beaches in the southern islands were spectacular, not that I got to do much sunbathing. Later on, we headed north to the capital Bangkok and up to the mountains of Chiang Mai.

How does this latest trip compare to your previous travel adventures?

Barney This was so different to anywhere we've been before. It's our sixth road trip together – it's the furthest we've travelled, and it's the most exciting one yet.

Can you tell us about some of the activities you throw yourselves into?

Bradley We get up to all sorts. Barney really pushed me this series but I managed to get my own back on him a couple of times. I had a lot of fun playing with some amazing supersized robots [in Episode 3]. They were kitted with these little balls you could shoot out, so I had a great time terrorising Barney and the crew.

Barney I really packed out our itinerary. It was awesome to try out some national sports.

Barney and Bradley Walsh

The guys try a bit of sumo

Bradley Walsh pushes himself

In Episode 5, in Thailand, we had a go at the martial art Muay Thai. It was intense but a lot of fun. Some of the kids we got to train with were unbelievably strong – they nearly knocked Dad over.

We hear you had a go at sumo wrestling, too...

Barney Yes, in Japan. After a bit of training, we went toe to toe with professional sumo wrestlers, which was really cool. One of us ended up with a surprising victory – but I won't tell you who it was! Bradley We met some wonderful characters along the way who taught us so much about both countries' history and culture. I love taking it all in and learning as much as I can. We had a great guide who travelled with us across Japan. He was such a laugh and brilliant at karaoke.

What memories will especially stay with you?

Bradley For me, it has to be the quality time I got to spend with Barney and making lifelong memories together. It was such an incredible trip and so much fun. Barney I loved all the adrenaline-fuelled activities we took part in. The Anxiety State Crisis Cave was unreal. It was massive and definitely anxiety-inducing for Dad. Fulfilling a lifelong goal of becoming a ninja for a day in Episode 3 was also a lot of fun – but the best thing of all is that viewers still love the show and that we might have inspired other families to travel.

HOT stuff!

Dara Ó Briain goes with the flow as he visits Italy's active volcanoes

NEW DOCUMENTARY

Volcano with Dara Ó Briain

Tuesday & Wednesday, 9pm, 5

Dara Ó Briain finds himself scarily close to an erupting volcano for his latest TV series, Volcano with Dara Ó Briain, when he travels to Italy, a hotbed of volcanic activity.

Across two episodes, the comedian visits the country's most active and dangerous volcanoes – Mount Etna, Campi Flegrei, Stromboli and Vesuvius, famous for its AD 79 eruption that wiped out Pompeii.

He also enters a lava cave, learns how scientists use thermal imaging to scan for rising magma, and witnesses Stromboli's fiery lava fountains.

Here, Ó Briain, 53, tells TV&Satellite Week more about his seismic adventure...

Were you worried about the dangers of making this series? Volcanoes are very alluring, so you're drawn like a moth to a flame. But we didn't get too close and the team were very cautious. I once almost died in a river while filming for Comic Relief, so I don't do danger for the cameras any more!

What did you learn about the four volcanoes you visited?

In terms of their activity, they all behave differently. Etna's busy and when it goes off, it's dramatic, while Stromboli's constantly firing. Vesuvius will do nothing for years and then the eruption will be huge. But Campi Flegrei, a supervolcano underneath

Ó Briain explores

The excavations of Pompeii

Naples, will sit there for hundreds or thousands of years and then it will turn insane!

Is the threat to Naples significant?

Although Campi Flegrei is a supervolcano, it may not erupt within our lifetimes. Even Vesuvius, which tends to erupt once every 50 to 100 years, could be dramatic without being dangerous.

You felt the full force of Stromboli erupting. What was that like? Stromboli is a very interesting volcano, because it's like an open valve straight into hell and every 30 seconds it's spitting stuff out. When dusk appears so do the colours of the eruptions and they're amazing. We were all filming them on our phones – we wanted to capture the sight.

You learnt how scientists can predict eruptions. Was that reassuring?

When you're on a volcano, you think, 'This could go at any moment' But actually, scientists would see an uptick in activity, such as the changing nature of the gases. Even before Vesuvius erupted in AD 79, Pompeians had noticed changes. Nowadays, the city would be cleared after those changes had been spotted. The authorities would have enough of a warning, so it's not as if it just goes 'boom'!

NEW World's Most Dangerous Roads

Sunday, 8pm, U&Dave (box set, U)

2003

Born in Bromley in 1961, the deadpan comedian found fame in the 1990s with The Jack Dee Show on C4. He's also starred in comedy series Lead Balloon, Bad Move, Josh and Power Monkeys. He's been a regular on QI and Have I Got News for You and was a contestant on Series 18 of Taskmaster in 2024.

HIS NEW APPEARANCE

For the new series of World's Most Dangerous Roads, Dee teams up with stand-up comedian Jake Lambert for a wild ride through Kyrgyzstan. Starting from the capital, Bishkek, the pair must tackle horrifyingly narrow roads and muddy tracks rendered almost undrivable by rainstorms. And when Lambert is struck down by an illness that threatens their entire trip, will the famously grumpy Dee have any sympathy for his partner? 'I was thrilled to be asked to do World's Most Dangerous Roads until I found out where I was being sent and who I'd be going with,' he jokes.

A bestselling children's writer, whose career is in crisis following a social-media storm, faces further turmoil when the autistic son he never knew existed turns up out of the blue in BBC1's heart-warming Australian comedy Austin.

The Professor T star also co-wrote the eight-part series and told TV&Satellite Week in an exclusive interview how the show came about.

INSPIRATION

'We saw Michael in an Australian reality show about dating called Love on the Spectrum. He was brilliant in it and that was the germ of the idea,' says Miller, 59.

Troubled Australian cop James Cormack searches for his missing brother

NEW CRIME DRAMA

Black Snow

Friday, 9pm, BBC2 (box set, BBC iPlayer)

Things get personal for cold-case cop James Cormack (Travis Fimmel) in the second season of BBC2's gritty Australian crime drama Black Snow.

Julian (Ben Miller), Austin (Michael Theo) and Ingrid (Sally Phillips)

(Gia Carides) was living in London, sees Julian's tour as an opportunity to meet his father.

'Austin is trying to find out who he is,' explains Miller. 'When he arranges a meeting between his parents, he says to his mum, "I want you to be nice to my father, partly because I want to ingratiate myself with him, and partly because I'd really like to go to England," which I love! A lot of things in the show are inspired by things Michael has said or done.'

One of the reasons Julian is initially concerned is because the brief affair he had with Mel overlapped the start of his relationship with his illustrator wife Ingrid (Sally Phillips). Indeed, when Ingrid works out the dates and realises her husband was unfaithful to her back in the 1990s, their marriage is in a spot of bother.

UNEASY TRIP

'Julian and Ingrid's only daughter has just left for university,' says Miller. 'So they're empty nesters who are about to go on this big adventure around Australia, but this calamitous thing happens when they arrive.'

'It's an interesting period in a relationship when you're no longer doing hands-on parenting and you're getting to know each other again. It's almost like a romcom.'

As he investigates the case of Zoe Jacobs, who vanished from her own 21st-birthday party over 20 years ago, he also embarks on a quest to find his younger brother, Ritchie, who disappeared when they were children.

'This drama isn't just a whodunnit, it's a relationship-driven show, and James' history with his brother and father was what really interested me,' says Vikings and Dune: Prophecy star Fimmel, 45.

'This season we really delve into his background and his issues with his dad, his mum and his brother. I think James has been trying to avoid his own tortured path and his own pain. He's been trying to make it about somebody else so he can avoid his own stuff.'

Zoe Jacobs disappeared

As Zoe's family cling to the hope that she could still be alive, surprising new evidence comes to light about James' brother's disappearance, which leaves the cop questioning if he should give up his career to focus on finding answers about his past.

Meanwhile, there's another shock for James when his father is released from prison, which also stirs up bitter feelings from his childhood.

'I don't think James is as professional as he was in the first season,' says Fimmel. 'He's still very tortured. He still has his issues and, if anything, those issues get stronger on a very rocky road with his father.'

'But just when you think he's going to find closure, something else happens. He gets his hopes up or trusts the wrong person and then gets shut down!'

Season: 1 Episodes: 10

Life-and-death emergencies and personal crises deliver heart-racing tension in Pulse, Netflix's new medical drama following a team of ER doctors in Miami's busiest trauma centre.

The 10-parter follows compassionate but brash third-year resident Danielle 'Danny' Simms (Willia Fitzgerald), who receives a sudden promotion at Maguire Hospital after her much-admired boss Xander Phillips (Colin Woodell) is suspended. But just as rumours of Danny's illicit, complex relationship with Xander – who comes from a powerful medical family – begin to send shock waves through the ER, doctors find themselves facing an influx of trauma cases when a terrifying hurricane hurtles towards Miami.

The hospital goes into lockdown and Maguire's brilliant chair of surgery and emergency medicine, Natalie Cruz (Justina Machado), decides to call Xander in as they are short-staffed. Can he and Danny manage their professional responsibilities and private entanglements during a natural disaster?

PRESSURE COOKER

'You don't really want to be in the hospital, but if you were, this is the one you'd want to be in,' says creator Zoe Robyn, whose credits include The Equalizer. 'You'd want to be in the care of these people, but we also wanted the characters to go through the relatable issues of working together in a pressure cooker, so relationships are forming and breaking apart.'

Danny is flawed, fallible and complicated. Her relationship with Xander is an authentic look at a workplace romance and the show plays in the grey area of that situation. It shows the edges and pitfalls of their relationship, but also all the joyous moments of working a high-pressure job like this.'

The talented staff at Maguire include charming second-year surgical student Tom Cole (Jack Bannon), calm and considered third-year emergency-medicine resident Sam Elijah (Jessie T. Usher) and demanding senior surgeon Ruben Soriano (Nestor Carbonell). Plus, there's ambitious surgical intern Sophie Chen (Chelsea Muirhead), cheery medical student Camila Perez (Daniela Nieves) and Danny's self-assured younger sister, emergency-medicine resident Harper Simms (Jessy Yates).

Lost writer Carlton Cuse also served as showrunner on the series, which was shot in Miami and Albuquerque, New Mexico, and is Netflix's first English-language medical procedural.

'There's a uniqueness about Miami that's so special. We wanted to embrace the multicultural quality of the city in the show,' he says.

'Nowadays, your work family can really be the most important community you have, and the complications that arise between what's happening on and off the clock can get messy and confusing. That's what we wanted to explore with Pulse.'

Demon hunter

Kevin Bacon does the Devil's work in an action-packed fantasy series

The Bondsman

NEW Available: Thu 3 April Genre: Fantasy drama Season: 1 Episodes: 8

Back in 1990, Kevin Bacon was busy trying to find out what happens when we die as an inquisitive medical student in horror movie Flatliners, co-starring Kiefer Sutherland and Julia Roberts. And 35 years later, his title character in new Prime Video series The Bondsman is finally going to find out – and it's not what he or anyone else expected!

The Hollywood star plays grizzled bounty hunter Hub Halloran, whose world is turned upside down after he is brutally attacked while attempting to apprehend a felon in a rather unorthodox way, by lobbing a hornet's nest into a motel room.

BACK FROM THE DEAD

Coming round with a nasty-looking gash across his throat, Hub is unimpressed to learn that the boyfriend of his country-singer ex-wife Maryanne (The Righteous Gemstones' Jennifer Nettles) hired the men who jumped him.

When Hub encounters a demonic preacher in possession of other-worldly powers, he discovers, courtesy of a mysterious visitor who arrives to take him through his 'orientation', that he actually died in the attack but has been resurrected by the Devil to trap and send back demons that have escaped from Hell.

Only by chasing down those demons, with the help and hindrance of his estranged family, will Hub learn how his own sins got his soul condemned – and get a second chance at life, love and music.

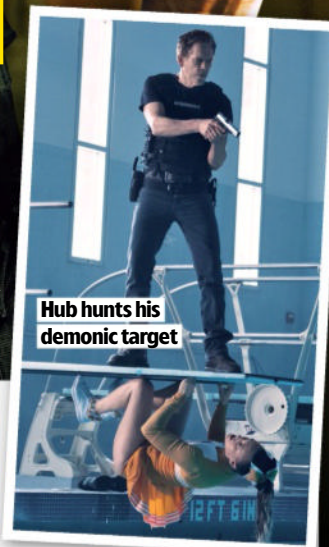

'Whenever I get sent a script, the first thing I look at is: "Who is this guy, and is it something I haven't done before?"' says Bacon. 'And I found Hub fascinating because he's such a badass, but he's still a mama's boy, living in his mother's garage. He's a man-child!'

The 66-year-old also wrote and recorded music for the series with co-star Nettles.

'The Bondsman goes to places you don't expect it to,' he adds. 'With all the craziness going on – demons from Hell and rebirth and blood and gore – it's still pretty grounded, and I wanted Hub to feel like a real person.'

Vincent Cassel plays a DJ recruited to bust a criminal gang

NETFLIX Banger

NEW Available: Wednesday 2 April
Genre: One-off comedy

Actor Vincent Cassel has carved out a name for himself in both Hollywood and his native France since his breakout role in the critically acclaimed 1995 social thriller La Haine.

He has gone on to feature in English-speaking films including Elizabeth (1998), Ocean's Twelve (2005), Black Swan (2011) and Jason Bourne (2016), as well as TV's Westworld.

'The best thing is to be able to work everywhere, to be called and then you just pick what you want,' says the 58-year-old son of actor Jean-Pierre Cassel. 'I've been pretty spoilt.'

Cassel has portrayed his fair share of bad guys, including his award-winning role as real-life gangster Jacques Mesrine in Mesrine (2009).

'I do think villains are more interesting. They're more fun to play,' he says. 'They're far more true to life than really good people.'

But this week, the star leans into his funny side for Netflix's French comedy caper Banger, playing washed-up DJ Scorpex, who's recruited by intelligence officer Rose (Laura Felpin) to take down a criminal gang with links to his rival, DJ Vestax (rapper and actor Mister V). Scorpex sees it as his chance to get back on top.

The film reflects Cassel's keenness to keep on expanding his repertoire.

'If you line up my films one after the other, there are very few that I could show my children,' he says. 'I told them that later they'd understand their dad is a bit weird!'

Forgotten victims

Why did a serial killer go undetected for decades?

NETFLIX Gone Girls: The Long Island Serial Killer

NEW Available: Monday 31 March
Genre: Documentary Season: 1 Episodes: 3

In 2010 and 2011 detectives began investigating the murders of at least 10 sex workers whose bodies were all found along a stretch of the same beach on Long Island, New York.

But with many of the women reported missing years earlier, and some of the deaths dating back to at least 1993, why did it take so long for the authorities to realise a serial killer was at large?

That's the question Netflix's three-part true-crime docuseries Gone Girls: The Long Island Serial Killer poses as it explores the stigma of the victims' work and possible police corruption.

'I wanted to bring these women to life and make them relatable. These are people's daughters, sisters, mothers,' says the series director Liz Garbus.

INVESTIGATION

The chilling case began when the remains of four victims, Megan Waterman, Melissa Barthelemy, Amber Costello and Maureen Brainard-Barnes, were found within a quarter of a mile of each other near Long Island's Gilgo Beach in December 2010.

The following year, six more sets of remains were discovered. Yet it wasn't until 2023 that 59-year-old architect Rex Heuermann was arrested and later charged, with the victims' families convinced that their loved ones' jobs as sex workers contributed to delays in the investigation.

'These family members knew that there was a need to shake up the establishment to get attention for this case,' says Garbus. 'The system should have protected their family members. But at the end of the day, their voices really mattered.'

But as Heuermann, who has pleaded not guilty to seven counts of murder, awaits trial, could there be even more victims?

'They continue to add more cases to Rex's docket,' says Garbus. 'There are many people who are still thinking that their missing loved ones could be connected to Rex.'

Tribe with Bruce Parry

Sunday, 9pm, BBC2
(box set, BBC iPlayer)

It's been nearly two decades since the last series of Tribe, BBC2's award-winning show following the experiences of explorer Bruce Parry as he lived with tribes in the most far-flung places in the world.

But now the documentary-maker, indigenous-rights activist and former Royal Marine is back with a fourth series, which sees him once again spending time with communities living very different lives from our own.

'I'd been away from TV for over

10 years, but I came back because I felt I was still on a journey to share some of the insights I'd received from my time with tribal people,' Parry, 56, tells TV&Satellite Week. 'I had seen the problems with globalisation and climate change and how they've affected these communities, so I felt energised about their plight.'

In the first episode of the three-part series, Parry travels deep into Colombia's Amazon rainforest to meet the Waimaha people, becoming the first foreigner to live with them.

Cameras also capture sharp-tailed grouse in a mating dance, caribou crossing a raging river and snowshoe hares outrunning lynx.

Bad Dog Academy

Thursday, 8pm, C4

Canine experts are on hand to school more poorly behaved pooches – and their sometimes equally troublesome owners – on how to conduct themselves in public in a second run of the show (formerly known as The Dog Academy). But will they be able to teach some of the country's naughtiest dogs to mend their cheeky ways?

Canoeing on the Tiquié River

Rubber tappers and missionaries nearly destroyed Waimaha culture in the 20th century, so Parry is initially viewed with suspicion but he is determined to learn about the Waimaha's deep understanding of nature that enables them to thrive in the jungle.

NEW EXPERIENCES

'There's a plant that allows them to connect on a very deep level with the forest,' he says. 'And they use it to make a psychoactive brew called yagé.'

Parry takes part in the yagé ritual, which involves members of the tribe dancing for hours until they are able to enter a trance-like state.

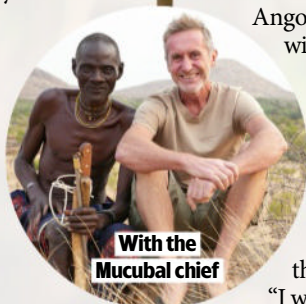

'It was quite nerve-racking because every time you allow your body to receive such powerful medicine, you've no idea what it's going to reveal,' he says. 'It's a medicine for the psyche as much as it is for the body and you're peeling off the layers of the onion, without knowing what's beneath. But it was a beautiful experience and I got a deep appreciation of these people and their connection to the forest in a way words can't really summarise.'

Later in the series, Parry is initiated into the Mucubal people who live in the desert region of Angola. It is something that will stay with him for ever.

'I was asked to suffocate a goat, which would be used to feed the tribe,' he explains. 'My first reaction was, "I don't want to do this." But then my next one was, "I want to get this right."

But I also thought, "Who am I to judge these people?" We eat meat in Western society, but we've just shut out that part of the process.'

Ashley Cain braves Rio de Janeiro's crime-ridden favelas

NEW FACTUAL

Ashley Cain: Into the Danger Zone

Tue, 9pm, BBC3 (box set, iPlayer)

Former Coventry City footballer turned influencer and endurance athlete Ashley Cain risks life and limb for his new series as he immerses himself in some of the world's most dangerous cities.

In BBC3's Ashley Cain: Into the Danger Zone, he will meet everyone from mercenaries in Marseilles to gang members in a Philippine prison and South African poachers in a bid to explore the lives of young men born into these lawless environments.

CORRUPTION

'I'm travelling to some of the planet's most hostile places to meet those who have chosen a life of extreme criminality,' says Cain, 34. 'I may not condone what they do to get by, but by walking in their shoes I can at least understand them.'

In the first episode, Cain heads to Brazil, where he visits some of Rio de Janeiro's favelas, or impoverished neighbourhoods. There, he sees people selling huge quantities of class A drugs in plain sight and encounters balaclava-clad young men brandishing machine guns at every turn.

These youths are prepared to fight to the death as part of a turf war between rival drug cartels. They also battle the corrupt militia supposedly guarding the neighbourhoods, and Cain accompanies a gang member as he patrols the favela, ready to shoot any rival cartel members or even cops.

EXTREMES

'I didn't know what to think,' he admits. 'My adrenaline was spiking because of the danger and threat. I was fearing for my life.'

As well as getting to know the younger 'foot soldiers' in the organised-crime gangs, Cain also talks to a militia boss and meets the bereaved family members of a murdered youth. He also finds some hope thanks to the charities determined to help those in the favelas.

'Rio de Janeiro is a city of extremes,' concludes Cain. 'It's stunningly beautiful and deeply dangerous. With little access to education, jobs or real opportunities, many young men see the criminal world as their only way out.'

BRIDGET JONES MAD ABOUT THE BOY

A triumphant Renée Zellweger returns older, wiser but just as much fun as ever

COMEDY

From Monday, to buy or rent from digital stores including Sky Store and Prime Video

Almost a quarter of a century since she first played Helen Fielding's klutzy, calorie-counting diarist on screen, Renée Zellweger is back for her fourth outing in the role – and the result is the best instalment in the series since the character's 2001 film debut. Bridget is no longer a Chardonnay-guzzling, cigarette-puffing singleton but a middle-aged single mum with two primary school kids.

Four years ago, Bridget's husband, dashing barrister Mark Darcy (Colin Firth), was killed leaving her a widow with an enviably large house beside Hampstead Heath. Now, however, she is tentatively trying to date again and finds herself with two very different potential suitors: a young park ranger named Roxster (Leo Woodall) and her son's fussy science teacher Mr Wallaker (Chiwetel Ejiofor).

Naturally, Bridget gets into comic scrapes as she attempts to sort out her love life, but she has far fewer slapstick pratfalls than before and her boozy friends also get less of a look in. The film is still funny, fortunately, but Bridget's grief brings out the story's more heartfelt elements, too, with Firth reappearing as a kind of ghostly presence in her life. Best of all, though, is Hugh Grant, returning as caddish Daniel Cleaver, and his impeccable comic timing sees him steal every scene he is in. 2024, 15, 125MIN

This minor but pleasant slice-of-life comedy drama stars a wonderful Edie Falco as a woman used to caring for others. That includes a mother (Jeannie Berlin) with various medical conditions, an eight-month pregnant daughter (Kayli Carter) who's freaking out about every little thing and an ex-addict son (Charlie Tahan) refusing to go to therapy. Add to the list a lover (Sepideh Moafi) who seems to see Falco as nothing more than a sexual outlet. Where is the 'me' time for her? This little movie bustles along nicely enough and is good company – especially with Falco at its core surrounded by other fine actors, including Bradley Whitford and Michael Rapaport – but it lacks a forceful propellant to really make it sing. 2023, 12, 98MIN

A good old-fashioned supernatural thriller, this expands upon a small section of Bram Stoker's Dracula that recounts the vampire's journey to England by ship, hidden in earth-filled crates. Even though we know the outcome from the get-go, the movie makes for fun, bloody entertainment as we follow what occurs on the Demeter through the eyes of the ship's doctor (Corey Hawkins). It's essentially a B-movie on steroids, but a fine cast, including a terrific Liam Cunningham as the captain, steers this stormy, sea-spattered adventure to its inevitably grisly conclusion. 2023, 15, 118MIN

A raucous, in-your-face comedy about the trials and tribulations of pregnancy that leaves little to the imagination, this gets up-close-and-personal throughout the event. After single New York yoga instructor Ilana Glazer decides to keep the baby after a one-night stand, she falls back on her very best friend and mother-of-two Michelle Buteau to help her through the process. This is not a gentle, quiet comedy (Glazer is constantly dialled up to 11), but it's refreshingly honest and the women's relationship is a blast. The finale may even leave a tear in your eye... 2024, 15, 104MIN

Making his second film as a writer-director, Jesse Eisenberg has come up with a real gem, a movie about two mismatched Jewish-American cousins on a 'Holocaust tour' of Poland that balances laugh-out-loud comedy with heart-wrenching and insightful drama. Eisenberg plays David, a moderately successful New Yorker with a wife and daughter, while Kieran Culkin is Benji, a single jobless screw-up.

'Joined at the hip' when they were young, the pair have drifted apart but reunite for the tour to honour their recently deceased grandmother, a Holocaust survivor. David is twitchy and uptight while Benji is a mischief-making extrovert who manages to be both rude and charismatically charming.

In the course of the tour (led by Will Sharpe's well-meaning English guide), we realise that Benji is the more deeply troubled one. Culkin's genuinely brilliant, Oscar-winning performance has grabbed most attention, but almost everything in Eisenberg's film, from the title with its deft double meaning to the use of Chopin nocturnes and impromptus on the soundtrack, is exquisitely well judged too. 2024, 15, 90MIN

Kick-off 12.15pm, ITV1

The quarter-final action begins at Craven Cottage, where Fulham lost 2-0 to Palace in the league in February. Fulham are chasing only a third FA Cup semi-final appearance in 50 years, while Palace made the last four as recently as 2022.

Despicable Me 4

Friday, 7.50am & 4.30pm, Sky Premiere

In this latest instalment, former villain Gru and his family – wife Lucy, three adopted daughters Margo, Edith and Agnes, and baby Gru Jr – find out that they're in danger from a supervillain called Maxime Le Mal (voiced by Will Ferrell) – and so they're forced to take on new identities as the 'Cunninghams', and move to a safe house in another town.

But after they move, Gru is recognised by teenager Poppy (Joey King), who lives next door. This teen threatens to blow Gru's cover, unless he helps her pull a heist. From here on, expect plenty of hilarity, as well as a good dose of slapstick comedy courtesy of the Minions. A great reliable watch for everyone.

Deep Cover

Orlando Bloom, Bryce Dallas Howard and Nick Mohammed star in a comic crime thriller

An improvisation teacher and her students must attempt to infiltrate a menacing criminal gang in Prime Video's high-octane comedy Deep Cover.

The film, available from 12 June, sees Bryce Dallas Howard play Kat, whose dream of becoming a successful comedian is fading fast as she is stuck running improvisation classes in London.

Kat's life is changed for ever, though, when a police officer gives her and two of her students – struggling actor Marlon (Orlando Bloom) and shy banker Hugh (Nick Mohammed) – the chance to demonstrate their improv skills in the real world by going undercover to help bring down some dodgy crooks. But it's not long before Kat, Marlon and Hugh realise they have bitten off way more than they can chew.

STAR NAMES

Paddy Considine, Sonoya Mizuno, Ian McShane and Sean Bean are also in the cast.

'It's a total blast and Orlando is revelatory in it – no one has seen him be anything like this – and Nick's so talented,' says Howard.

'The characters get sucked into this criminal underground world because they are recruited by the police to pretend to be a part of it. But they very quickly get into a lot of trouble...'

'It turns into this massive underworld drug chase with these people who have no idea what they're doing,' adds Bloom. 'It's a sort of action-comedy caper and a great spectacle.'
